

WALL ST. STOCK REPORTS.

Brokers Fervid and Nervous and Stocks Generally Heavy.

Great Indignation Over the Sugar Trust Dividend.

The Bank Statement Shows a Further Loss of Reserve.

ROKERS were still in a nervous and feverish condition this morning, notwithstanding the fact that the Treasury Department advanced the prices for U. S. 4 per cent. bonds and will buy all that are offered at 125. Trust stocks were especially heavy. Chicago Gas falling 3/4 to 4 1/2, and Sugar certificates 1/4 to 3/4. The raising of the dividend by the Trusts has raised a howl of indignation, not because the dividend was passed or postponed, but for the underhanded way in which it was done.

Certainly it was no time for a Board, which presumably has the best interest of the stockholders at heart, to adopt such methods.

Those of the Trusts' friends who make a pretense of defending them, say that it was a clever piece of work and was called for by the exigencies of the situation.

Stock Exchange cynics, however, are muttering about "sandbag" tactics, and say that Inspector Byrnes has another name for it.

There was a decline of 1/4 to 3/4 under the leadership of North American and the Northern Pacific.

The market closed with a rally of 1/4 to 1 1/4 on the announcement that Secretary Windom was in conference with the President at the Sub-Treasury and would come to the relief of the money market on once.

The bank statement shows a loss in reserve of $1,005,000, and the banks are now $1,000,000 below legal requirements.

The following show the condition of the New York City banks this week as compared with last:

Table with 4 columns: Bank Name, Assets, Liabilities, and Capital.

Bank Name	Assets	Liabilities	Capital
Am. Cotton Oil Tr. Co.	25,000,000	25,000,000	25,000,000
Am. Sav. Bk. & Tr. Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Am. Trust Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of Am.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of N.Y.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000

Table with 4 columns: Bank Name, Assets, Liabilities, and Capital.

Bank Name	Assets	Liabilities	Capital
Am. Cotton Oil Tr. Co.	25,000,000	25,000,000	25,000,000
Am. Sav. Bk. & Tr. Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Am. Trust Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of Am.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of N.Y.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000

Table with 4 columns: Bank Name, Assets, Liabilities, and Capital.

Bank Name	Assets	Liabilities	Capital
Am. Cotton Oil Tr. Co.	25,000,000	25,000,000	25,000,000
Am. Sav. Bk. & Tr. Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Am. Trust Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of Am.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of N.Y.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000

Table with 4 columns: Bank Name, Assets, Liabilities, and Capital.

Bank Name	Assets	Liabilities	Capital
Am. Cotton Oil Tr. Co.	25,000,000	25,000,000	25,000,000
Am. Sav. Bk. & Tr. Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Am. Trust Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of Am.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of N.Y.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000

Table with 4 columns: Bank Name, Assets, Liabilities, and Capital.

Bank Name	Assets	Liabilities	Capital
Am. Cotton Oil Tr. Co.	25,000,000	25,000,000	25,000,000
Am. Sav. Bk. & Tr. Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Am. Trust Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of Am.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Bank of N.Y.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000
Chas. F. Smith & Co.	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000

WRECK ON THE HARLEM ROAD.

Three Men Badly Hurt in Collision at Melrose Freight Yard.

A Freight Train Telescoped by an Express Through a Mismatched Switch.

A misplaced switch caused a collision in the Melrose freight yard of the Harlem Railroad, at One Hundred and Sixty-second street and Railroad avenue at 7:40 o'clock this morning.

Three trainmen were very seriously, and in one case probably fatally, wounded. Their names are:

ANSON F. CHASE, brakeman, 27 years old, fireman, had his right ankle badly injured. He was taken to the Harlem Hospital.

WALTER DEXTER, conductor, had his right wrist broken. He was taken to the Grand Central Depot.

FARSON H. MARSH, brakeman, living at One Hundred and Sixty-second street and Washington avenue, had his right hip broken. His injuries are such that at the Harlem Hospital, where he was taken, it is thought doubtful if he recovers.

A special train of the American Express Company, under the charge of Conductor Dexter, left the Grand Central Depot at 7:30, bound north.

It ran at moderate speed until the Melrose yard was reached, where, by reason of a switch being turned the wrong way, the train ran on a siding, and before it had stopped it was struck by a south-bound freight train standing there.

The impact of the two trains gave a terrible shock to the cars, and all the trainmen and expressmen were very badly shaken up. They were panic-stricken for a few moments, but order was soon restored when it was found that no one was killed.

Two freight cars were telescoped by the locomotive of the express train and completely demolished. The injured men were jammed between the cars of the express train, which were pushed together with terrific force.

The tracks were cleared as rapidly as possible and traffic resumed.

At the Grand Central Depot it was stated that the collision had occurred between a train composed of engine and baggage car that had left there at 6 o'clock and a freight train that was on a siding at the Melrose freight yard.

Through a misunderstanding as to a signal the engine and baggage-car, the latter of which belonged to the American Express Company, ran into the freight train, smashing several of its cars.

The injured men were on the engine and baggage-car. No one was injured on the freight train.

SHOT IN THE NECK.

Yank Wilson, of the Village Gang, "Done" by a Saloon-Keeper.

Old Man Claus and His Wife Held for Queens County Grand Jury.

One Dead Child and a Dying One Found in Their Hut by the Police.

Death the Certain Outcome of a Barroom Row.

End of a Bully's Reign of Terror on First Avenue.

William Wilson, better known on First Avenue as "Yank" Wilson, aged thirty-one, one of the shining lights of the "Village Gang," was shot and mortally injured in a midnight feud in the saloon at 500 First avenue. The saloon-keeper, John Buggeln, shot him, as he claims, in self-defense. Wilson is dying in Bellevue Hospital and Buggeln is under arrest.

The police are waiting no pity on the dying man. They give him the bad reputation of an ex-convict, who has already served five years for stabbing a man. He is one of the leaders of the gang that disgraces that part of First avenue, and has been in innumerable rows, the scars from which cover his body like the scales of a fish.

Wilson is a genuine "tough," with the build and strength of a young bull and all its vicious disposition. He married the sister of poor Joe Fogarty, the crippled morgue-keeper who died a year or two ago.

Despite his record, Wilson was entrusted with the position of night watchman at the plant of the East River Electric Light Company, in Twenty-ninth street, east of First avenue. He lived at 349 East Thirtieth street.

Buggeln's saloon, at the corner of Twenty-ninth street, has been a sort of headquarters for Wilson. The German kept as decent a place as a man can in such a locality. He kept well enough with the bully until he hired John McCauley, an ex-police-man, to tend bar for him. There is an old feud between McCauley and Wilson, and the latter tried to make the new place as unpleasant as he could. He tried to raise a row there on half a dozen occasions when McCauley was behind the bar, and was, the latter says, repeatedly tried to do him up.

Wilson's temper was soured last night by finding another police enemy on the post at midnight. He threatened William Crockett, a thorn in the flesh of the First Avenue toughs, who have repeatedly been in the saloon since nightfall.

A couple of months ago Crockett looked Wilson up. Last night when the latter saw him at the corner and his enemy the policeman, he was determined to do it, as it is said, to "do" one or the other up before morning. Somebody was "done up," but not according to Wilson's policy.

Wilson had been trying all the day and evening to pick a quarrel with the ex-policeman behind the bar, but without success. McCauley stood clear of him, with more forbearance than he deserved, the police say.

Wilson, the barkeeper went off duty. Wilson was drunk and ripe for a row. Buggeln, whom he ordinarily did not trouble, had to put him out of the saloon at half past one. He threatened the foreman of the Electric Light Company, and demanded drinks. Before he had been in the saloon five minutes he was at his old tricks, and Buggeln warned him that he would go out heels over head in another minute.

Wilson picked up a beer glass and threatened to brain the saloon-keeper, but before it flew from his hand Buggeln pulled a revolver from under the bar and shot him down.

Policeman Crockett heard the shot as he was standing across the avenue, and ran over. Wilson was on the floor, shot through the neck.

Roundsman Moran responded to the policeman's alarm, and an ambulance was called. All the loungers in the saloon and the saloon-keeper himself were arrested. A charge of felonious assault was made against Buggeln, and the others were locked up "on suspicion," really as witnesses. They were William Curry, Becker, the foreman; Daniel Ryan, a meter-carrier; James Lyons, William R. Burke and John Ryan. They all know Wilson.

The bully was stretched on a cot in the hospital at 11 A. M. The bullet passed through the neck. The bullet was found lodged in the muscles alongside the spinal column. His passage it had lacerated the windpipe.

At 2 A. M. the doctors performed the operation of tracheotomy, but without hope of saving the patient. He died before they called the coroner to hear a statement of the row as he might be able to make.

Buggeln was arraigned before Justice McMahon, in the Yorkville Court, this forenoon, and committed without bail to await the result of Wilson's injuries.

AFTER THE SPOOK PICTURES.

Gen. Dias De Bar Makes a Call at Police Headquarters.

Gen. Joseph H. Dias De Bar, husband of the spook fraud, Mrs. Edith Lolita Dias De Bar, called at Police Headquarters this morning and had a brief interview with Inspector Byrnes.

Through a misunderstanding as to a signal the engine and baggage-car, the latter of which belonged to the American Express Company, ran into the freight train, smashing several of its cars.

The injured men were on the engine and baggage-car. No one was injured on the freight train.

KILLED ON THE "L."

Fatal Accident in the Sixth Avenue Elevated Railroad Yard.

John Robinson, a brakeman employed on the Third Avenue Elevated Railroad, was on his way to work at 6:55 this morning. He had been in a train at One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street and Eighth avenue, and while waiting for his train attempted to cross the track.

At that moment engine 234 came running along and before Robinson could escape it had cut him down.

Robinson was a Westchester man, and lived at Highbridge.

Found in the North River.

The body of a well-dressed man was found at 4 o'clock this morning floating in the North River, at the upper end of the Elysian Field. He was about forty years old, 5 feet tall, dark hair and smooth face.

Rain and Cooler.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Weather indications for the next few days: Rain, cool, and clear.

SHOT IN THE NECK.

Yank Wilson, of the Village Gang, "Done" by a Saloon-Keeper.

Old Man Claus and His Wife Held for Queens County Grand Jury.

One Dead Child and a Dying One Found in Their Hut by the Police.

Death the Certain Outcome of a Barroom Row.

End of a Bully's Reign of Terror on First Avenue.

William Wilson, better known on First Avenue as "Yank" Wilson, aged thirty-one, one of the shining lights of the "Village Gang," was shot and mortally injured in a midnight feud in the saloon at 500 First avenue. The saloon-keeper, John Buggeln, shot him, as he claims, in self-defense. Wilson is dying in Bellevue Hospital and Buggeln is under arrest.

The police are waiting no pity on the dying man. They give him the bad reputation of an ex-convict, who has already served five years for stabbing a man. He is one of the leaders of the gang that disgraces that part of First avenue, and has been in innumerable rows, the scars from which cover his body like the scales of a fish.

Wilson is a genuine "tough," with the build and strength of a young bull and all its vicious disposition. He married the sister of poor Joe Fogarty, the crippled morgue-keeper who died a year or two ago.

Despite his record, Wilson was entrusted with the position of night watchman at the plant of the East River Electric Light Company, in Twenty-ninth street, east of First avenue. He lived at 349 East Thirtieth street.

Buggeln's saloon, at the corner of Twenty-ninth street, has been a sort of headquarters for Wilson. The German kept as decent a place as a man can in such a locality. He kept well enough with the bully until he hired John McCauley, an ex-police-man, to tend bar for him. There is an old feud between McCauley and Wilson, and the latter tried to make the new place as unpleasant as he could. He tried to raise a row there on half a dozen occasions when McCauley was behind the bar, and was, the latter says, repeatedly tried to do him up.

Wilson's temper was soured last night by finding another police enemy on the post at midnight. He threatened William Crockett, a thorn in the flesh of the First Avenue toughs, who have repeatedly been in the saloon since nightfall.

A couple of months ago Crockett looked Wilson up. Last night when the latter saw him at the corner and his enemy the policeman, he was determined to do it, as it is said, to "do" one or the other up before morning. Somebody was "done up," but not according to Wilson's policy.

Wilson had been trying all the day and evening to pick a quarrel with the ex-policeman behind the bar, but without success. McCauley stood clear of him, with more forbearance than he deserved, the police say.

Wilson, the barkeeper went off duty. Wilson was drunk and ripe for a row. Buggeln, whom he ordinarily did not trouble, had to put him out of the saloon at half past one. He threatened the foreman of the Electric Light Company, and demanded drinks. Before he had been in the saloon five minutes he was at his old tricks, and Buggeln warned him that he would go out heels over head in another minute.

Wilson picked up a beer glass and threatened to brain the saloon-keeper, but before it flew from his hand Buggeln pulled a revolver from under the bar and shot him down.

Policeman Crockett heard the shot as he was standing across the avenue, and ran over. Wilson was on the floor, shot through the neck.

Roundsman Moran responded to the policeman's alarm, and an ambulance was called. All the loungers in the saloon and the saloon-keeper himself were arrested. A charge of felonious assault was made against Buggeln, and the others were locked up "on suspicion," really as witnesses. They were William Curry, Becker, the foreman; Daniel Ryan, a meter-carrier; James Lyons, William R. Burke and John Ryan. They all know Wilson.

The bully was stretched on a cot in the hospital at 11 A. M. The bullet passed through the neck. The bullet was found lodged in the muscles alongside the spinal column. His passage it had lacerated the windpipe.

At 2 A. M. the doctors performed the operation of tracheotomy, but without hope of saving the patient. He died before they called the coroner to hear a statement of the row as he might be able to make.

Buggeln was arraigned before Justice McMahon, in the Yorkville Court, this forenoon, and committed without bail to await the result of Wilson's injuries.

AFTER THE SPOOK PICTURES.

Gen. Dias De Bar Makes a Call at Police Headquarters.

Gen. Joseph H. Dias De Bar, husband of the spook fraud, Mrs. Edith Lolita Dias De Bar, called at Police Headquarters this morning and had a brief interview with Inspector Byrnes.

Through a misunderstanding as to a signal the engine and baggage-car, the latter of which belonged to the American Express Company, ran into the freight train, smashing several of its cars.

The injured men were on the engine and baggage-car. No one was injured on the freight train.

KILLED ON THE "L."

Fatal Accident in the Sixth Avenue Elevated Railroad Yard.

John Robinson, a brakeman employed on the Third Avenue Elevated Railroad, was on his way to work at 6:55 this morning. He had been in a train at One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street and Eighth avenue, and while waiting for his train attempted to cross the track.

At that moment engine 234 came running along and before Robinson could escape it had cut him down.

Robinson was a Westchester man, and lived at Highbridge.

Found in the North River.

The body of a well-dressed man was found at 4 o'clock this morning floating in the North River, at the upper end of the Elysian Field. He was about forty years old, 5 feet tall, dark hair and smooth face.

Rain and Cooler.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Weather indications for the next few days: Rain, cool, and clear.

CHARGED WITH BABY MURDER.

Old Man Claus and His Wife Held for Queens County Grand Jury.

One Dead Child and a Dying One Found in Their Hut by the Police.

Death the Certain Outcome of a Barroom Row.

End of a Bully's Reign of Terror on First Avenue.

William Wilson, better known on First Avenue as "Yank" Wilson, aged thirty-one, one of the shining lights of the "Village Gang," was shot and mortally injured in a midnight feud in the saloon at 500 First avenue. The saloon-keeper, John Buggeln, shot him, as he claims, in self-defense. Wilson is dying in Bellevue Hospital and Buggeln is under arrest.

The police are waiting no pity on the dying man. They give him the bad reputation of an ex-convict, who has already served five years for stabbing a man. He is one of the leaders of the gang that disgraces that part of First avenue, and has been in innumerable rows, the scars from which cover his body like the scales of a fish.

Wilson is a genuine "tough," with the build and strength of a young bull and all its vicious disposition. He married the sister of poor Joe Fogarty, the crippled morgue-keeper who died a year or two ago.

Despite his record, Wilson was entrusted with the position of night watchman at the plant of the East River Electric Light Company, in Twenty-ninth street, east of First avenue. He lived at 349 East Thirtieth street.

Buggeln's saloon, at the corner of Twenty-ninth street, has been a sort of headquarters for Wilson. The German kept as decent a place as a man can in such a locality. He kept well enough with the bully until he hired John McCauley, an ex-police-man, to tend bar for him. There is an old feud between McCauley and Wilson, and the latter tried to make the new place as unpleasant as he could. He tried to raise a row there on half a dozen occasions when McCauley was behind the bar, and was, the latter says, repeatedly tried to do him up.

Wilson's temper was soured last night by finding another police enemy on the post at midnight. He threatened William Crockett, a thorn in the flesh of the First Avenue toughs, who have repeatedly been in the saloon since nightfall.

A couple of months ago Crockett looked Wilson up. Last night when the latter saw him at the corner and his enemy the policeman, he was determined to do it, as it is said, to "do" one or the other up before morning. Somebody was "done up," but not according to Wilson's policy.

Wilson had been trying all the day and evening to pick a quarrel with the ex-policeman behind the bar, but without success. McCauley stood clear of him, with more forbearance than he deserved, the police say.

Wilson, the barkeeper went off duty. Wilson was drunk and ripe for a row. Buggeln, whom he ordinarily did not trouble, had to put him out of the saloon at half past one. He threatened the foreman of the Electric Light Company, and demanded drinks. Before he had been in the saloon five minutes he was at his old tricks, and Buggeln warned him that he would go out heels over head in another minute.

Wilson picked up a beer glass and threatened to brain the saloon-keeper, but before it flew from his hand Buggeln pulled a revolver from under the bar and shot him down.

Policeman Crockett heard the shot as he was standing across the avenue, and ran over. Wilson was on the floor, shot through the neck.

Roundsman Moran responded to the policeman's alarm, and an ambulance was called. All the loungers in the saloon and the saloon-keeper himself were arrested. A charge of felonious assault was made against Buggeln, and the others were locked up "on suspicion," really as witnesses. They were William Curry, Becker, the foreman; Daniel Ryan, a meter-carrier; James Lyons, William R. Burke and John Ryan. They all know Wilson.

The bully was stretched on a cot in the hospital at 11 A. M. The bullet passed through the neck. The bullet was found lodged in the muscles alongside the spinal column. His passage it had lacerated the windpipe.

At 2 A. M. the doctors performed the operation of tracheotomy, but without hope of saving the patient. He died before they called the coroner to hear a statement of the row as he might be able to make.

Buggeln was arraigned before Justice McMahon, in the Yorkville Court, this forenoon, and committed without bail to await the result of Wilson's injuries.

AFTER THE SPOOK PICTURES.

Gen. Dias De Bar Makes a Call at Police Headquarters.

Gen. Joseph H. Dias De Bar, husband of the spook fraud, Mrs. Edith Lolita Dias De Bar, called at Police Headquarters this morning and had a brief interview with Inspector Byrnes.

Through a misunderstanding as to a signal the engine and baggage-car, the latter of which belonged to the American Express Company, ran into the freight train, smashing several of its cars.

The injured men were on the engine and baggage-car. No one was injured on the freight train.

KILLED ON THE "L."

Fatal Accident in the Sixth Avenue Elevated Railroad Yard.

John Robinson, a brakeman employed on the Third Avenue Elevated Railroad, was on his way to work at 6:55 this morning. He had been in a train at One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street and Eighth avenue, and while waiting for his train attempted to cross the track.

At that moment engine 234 came running along and before Robinson could escape it had cut him down.

Robinson was a Westchester man, and lived at Highbridge.

Found in the North River.

The body of a well-dressed man was found at 4 o'clock this morning floating in the North River, at the upper end of the Elysian Field. He was about forty years old, 5 feet tall, dark hair and smooth face.

Rain and Cooler.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Weather indications for the next few days: Rain, cool, and clear.

WINDOM DOWNTOWN.

In Conference with Ten Bank Presidents at the Sub-Treasury.

Government Help Needed to Avert a Financial Crisis.

Great Stringency in the Money Market Caused by the McKinley Bill.

The stringency in the money market is becoming every day more threatening to legitimate trade, and the feeling this morning among all classes of business men is, that if something is not done very soon by the Treasury Department, matters will reach an alarming crisis.

Secretary Windom, who for several days past has been in constant communication with President Harrison in regard to the situation, came to town today, and during the forenoon was in consultation with downtown bankers.

Afterwards he went to the Sub-Treasury and had a conference with Assistant Treasurer Ellis H. Roberts. What measures will be taken to relieve the present tightness of the money market is still uncertain.

Secretary Windom has not yet given any official notice of his intention to purchase four per cent. bonds at 125, and as a consequence the four per cent. will not be received here for purchase, but should be offered at Washington.

The checks for the payment of the $600,000 purchase yesterday at 125, an advance of one per cent. over the last purchase, were delivered to the sellers of the bonds by the Sub-Treasury today.

Assistant Treasurer Roberts said early this morning that he had paid out more than $2,000,000 yesterday to the Clearing-house, and expected to pay out as much more today.

In regard to the scare which is based upon the belief that a large amount of money, according to reports, more than $50,000,000, will be required immediately to pay duties to take goods out of bond, Secretary Windom said that he had no doubt that Mr. Roberts said to an EVENING WORLD reporter.

"It might be suggested in the first place that the amount of duty payable on goods now in bond does not amount to more than $10,000,000.

"In the second place, if these goods are withdrawn in large amounts, and thrown upon the market, it will have a tendency to depress imports, so that the amount of revenue received will be diminished.

"At any rate it should not increase the stringency of the money market.

"I do not know what the Secretary of the Treasury proposes to do. It would be wise, however, in my opinion, for Congress to take action on the currency bill (Oct. 1, Mr. Roberts said to an EVENING WORLD reporter).

"It might be suggested in the first place that the amount of duty payable on goods now in bond does not amount to more than $10,000,000.

"In the second place, if these goods are withdrawn in large amounts, and thrown upon the market, it will have a tendency to depress imports, so that the amount of revenue received will be diminished.

"At any rate it should not increase the stringency of the money market.

"I do not know what the Secretary of the Treasury proposes to do. It would be wise, however, in my opinion, for Congress to take action on the currency bill (Oct. 1, Mr. Roberts said to an EVENING WORLD reporter).

A HOUSE TO HOUSE RECOUNT.

Census Bureau Will Again Enumerate New York's Population.

Census Superintendent Porter has awakened to the universal demand for a recount of New York's population so far as to order a count of the population by houses, which will begin early next week as a check on the census of June.

This work will unquestionably prove to the satisfaction of that gentleman that reckless and slovenly methods were employed by his lieutenants in gathering census information.

Though this count does not mean the recounting of the population by names and pedigrees, it is regarded as the precursor of a more complete enumeration. Mr. Porter's conscience has pricked him, and if the proper authorities, he says, will only ask him to do the work over again he will gladly comply with the request.

It is certain that whatever the results of the house-count will be, that work will be highly interesting, as it will afford an index of the overcounting in the census of 1880, and the efforts that are being made to institute a more accurate method of gathering census information.

The details of the work will be carried out by the Census Bureau, which has produced indisputable proof, based on the records of the Bureau of Vital Statistics.

The indications are that Mr. Porter will very speedily be called upon by the "proper authorities" to order a complete recount for it is well known that the census of 1880 was a failure, and that the census of 1890 will be a success.

Major Grant is still in the Adirondacks, but it is probable that he will return to the city in a few days. Mr. Porter immediately on his return.

Evidence of the gross inaccuracies of the Murray count continue to come to the attention of the public. Knowledge based on the records of the public schools.

In 1890 the average daily attendance of scholars was 113,444. In the case of 1880 it was 132,434. According to Superintendent Murray the gross inaccuracies of the Murray count continue to come to the attention of the public. Knowledge based on the records of the public schools.

In 1890 the average daily attendance of scholars was 113,444. In the case of 1880 it was 132,434. According to Superintendent Murray the gross inaccuracies of the Murray count continue to come to the attention of the public. Knowledge based on the records of the public schools.

COPPER SWEENEY'S SHOOTING.

The Story of His "Day Off" Told in Court, and He Is Held in $2,000.

Policeman Edward J. Sweeney, who is under arrest for shooting G. C. Rankin, alias Phoebe, in the house 137 Becker street, on the 13th inst., was arraigned in Jefferson Market Police Court today.

It appeared that Saturday, Sept. 6, Sweeney, who had a day off, got drunk and went to Frank Stevenson's "Slide" at 137 Becker street, where he had some quarrel with a woman.

He was then upstairs, drew his revolver and fired indiscriminately.

Rankin, a day-laborer, who was standing in the hall, was shot and killed.

Sweeney was locked up in default of $2,000 bail for examination on the 13th inst.

THREE SORRY RUNAWAYS.

Portchester Lads Who Will Be Glad to Get Back Home.

Seventeen boys and Joseph Desmond, seventeen years old each, and James Brummer, sixteen years old, who ran away from their homes in Portchester, Wednesday, and walked to this city, were this morning committed to the care of the Children's Commission by Justice Smith at the Tombs.

The boys failed to get work as anticipated and were sent to the city of New York.

The boys failed to get work as anticipated and were sent to the city of New York.

LITTLE BITS OF ACTORS.

Condensed players who have a curious history. One spunky mite who slapped the face of a Russian soldier. See the "Sunday World."

SPREAD THEIR WHITE WINGS.

First Race of the Manhattan Athletic Club's Yachtsmen.

The Match Between Marquitta and Liris Also to Be Decided.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

LARCHMONT, Sept. 13.—The first race ever sailed by the Manhattan Athletic Club was started under most favorable auspices.

The wind blew fresh from the southeast, and indications pointed to an increase in its strength towards afternoon. The weather was misty this morning, but the clearing skies promised a good race.

Although the start was announced for 11 o'clock, no one minded the slight delay that attended the sailing of the snow-sailed craft on their course.

The entries were as follows:

50-FOOT CLASS—CUTTERS.

1. Marquitta, owned by J. J. Marquitta, skipper, J. J. Marquitta.

2. Liris, owned by J. J. Marquitta, skipper, J. J. Marquitta.

3. Marquitta, owned by J. J. Marquitta, skipper, J. J. Marquitta.

4. Liris, owned by J. J. Marquitta, skipper, J. J. Marquitta.

5. Marquitta, owned by J. J. Marquitta, skipper, J. J. Marquitta.

6. Liris, owned by J. J. Marquitta, skipper, J. J. Marquitta.

7. Marquitta, owned by J. J. Marquitta, skipper, J. J. Marquitta.

8. Liris, owned by J. J. Marquitta, skipper, J. J. Mar